SHOT NEAR MIDNIGHT

Assailants Shoot Victim From Fast Traveling
Auto

PHILADELPHIA, July 27 (I.N.S.).—Shot mysteriously, by two men in a speeding machine, Harold Fisher, 24, Etnaus, Pa., today refused to reveal the identity of his assailants, according to police.

Fisher is being treated at Jefferson Hospital for a bullet wound in the right thigh.

Detectives believe he was shot in a renewal of an old feud and that he is shielding his assailants. Fisher, police say, refused to talk at first then later claimed the men were strangers.

Fisher was walking on the streets here shortly before midnight, police said, when a machine passed him at a high rate of speed. Two shots were fired and Fisher collapsed.

Detectives arrested Helen Murray, 23, Rose Healy, 22, Edward "Reddy" Healy, 33, and Rock Furman, 24, all of this city. They are charged with being material witnesses.

P. O. S. OF A. BAND MAKES 1ST PUBLIC APPEARANCE

Recently Reorganized Musical Group Is Directed By Jacob Smith

200 ATTEND MEETING

Two hundred men attended the open meeting of Washington Camp No. 789, P. O. S. of A., last night, when a very interesting and profitable session was held in Trades Hall. It was the first open meeting that the Camp has held recently and it was a great success.

Speakers reviewed what the P. O. S. of A. is doing in general and explained its principles and policies. There was music by the recently reorganized band under the able leadership of Jacob Smith.

The band was organized about two months ago and it has put new life into the entire organization. There are about 30 members in the band and the selections which were played last night elicited much favorable comment. It is believed that it will be but a short time before the band will well represent Bristol at every function where a musical organization of this character is desired.

Charles Rathke directed the local entertainment which delighted the gathering and called forth much applause.

Edwin E. Bach, assistant secretary of Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, gave a ringing address in which he told of what was being accomplished by the P. O. S. of A. in Philadelphia. Some of the facts revealed by the speaker were very enlightening even to those who have been active in the local camp.

The Rev. Franklin Duncombe, pastor of St. Philip's M. E. Church, Philadelphia, who is also a member of the local camp, gave a very interesting talk.

At the conclusion of the speaking and program of entertainment there were refreshments served and the meeting which had been in charge of Past District President, Henry M. Black, was dismissed.

McEntee, Doylestown Golf Champion, Wins Tourney

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., July 27.—Playing his usual consistent game of golf that last year carried him to the finals in the Philadelphia Junior championships where he lost out in a close match to Joe Green, Connie McEntee, club champion of the Doylestown Country Club today won the President's Cup tourney by winning from Frank Siegler, a veteran of the local course, 5 and 4 in the final round of 36 holes.

McEntee, known as Connie, is a student at the University of Pennsylvania and has been playing golf since he was fourteen. Last year he won the club championship and things look bright for him to retain that crown in the championship Burpee Cup tournament that will start next Saturday on the local course.

The match was even up at the end of the first eighteen holes in the morning but McEntee's afternoon play was too steady for Siegler.

In the second sixteen of the President's Cup tourney, James B. Cotton won from Charles Radcliffe in a close match, 2 and 1. The match was even up on the thirty-third hole.

In an 18-hole medal handicap tournament, Lawrence Mason won the low net prize with a 62 that included two 45's and a handicap of 30. A. M. Eastburn and Eugene VanPelt turned in 64's for the low gross scores.

PLAN FOR $10,000,000 MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM

Discuss Raising of Funds For Building at Valley
Forge

NEWS FROM PA. TOWNS

VALLEY FORGE, July 27 (I.N.S.).—Tentative plans for a fund for the construction of a huge Washington memorial auditorium here, as revealed by Rev. Herbert Burk, pastor of the Valley Forge Chapel, call for the raising of $10,000,000 on a basis of $1 each from ten million persons.

Rev. Burk said he hoped to break ground for the cornerstone of the building June 19, 1928, on the 150th anniversary of the Continental Army's march across the Schuylkill from Valley Forge to Norristown and Doylestown.

Dr. Burk hopes that the auditorium can be completed in time for the 200th anniversary of Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, 1932.

Erection of a gigantic auditorium has been made necessary, Dr. Burk said, by the increasing thousands of tourists who visit the shrine each year.

LANCASTER, July 27 (I.N.S.).—"White Foot," known here as the "Feline Torch," is dead.

The cat, which gained notoriety by fleeing to a barn filled with hay when its fur caught fire after flaming off from an incubator dropped on it, was killed by an automobile.

The cat's flaming fur ignited the hay, and the barn burned down, but "White Foot" escaped with scorched fur. All of its nine lives were snuffed out here, however, when the cat started across the road in the path of a speeding car.

YORK, July 27 (I.N.S.).—Vernon Ziegler deserted his wife because she was no lover of the bright lights, she told a local court when she had her spouse arrested for non-support.

"He told me when he left me," Mrs. Ziegler said, "that I was not wild enough for him—that if I would drink and smoke and dance he would think a lot more of me."

The court ordered Ziegler to make payments of $10 weekly to his wife or spend an indefinite vacation behind bars.

PITTSBURGH, July 27 (I.N.S.).—Pittsburgh is one of the healthiest cities in the United States for its size, Dr. Richard Brown, head of the health department, here, said.

Dr. Brown took exception to the report of agencies reporting vital statistics which said Pittsburgh had the largest death rate in the nation.

The smoke evil which has made the city unhealthy has been abated, Dr. Brown said, citing figures to show that the smoke has been reduced 60 per cent in the last 14 years.

Dr. Brown explained that a large number of deaths attributed to Pittsburgh included non-residents, accidents and suicides.

When the figures are checked up, Brown asserted, Pittsburgh will be found to rate as one of the healthiest cities of its size in existence—and getting healthier all the time.

INDIANA, July 27 (I.N.S.).—Charles Dewiler, of Everett, near Bedford, is in line for a medal. Just what kind of medal Dewiler deserves has not been determined, but Indiana believes his feat of walking 120 miles from his home to hear the Dempsey-Sharkey fight over the radio here should be properly recognized.

Dewiler, a guide for hunting and fishing parties, heard a radio for the first time that night. He walked the 120 miles in 23 hours, passing through Altoona, Gallitzin and Ebensburg.

STILLMAN'S BACKWOODS RBIDE

Bud Stillman, son of James A. Stillman, is shown with Lena Wilson and Father L'Ami, officiating priest at their marriage. Shortly before the wedding at Grand Anse, Quebec, it became known that the backwoods girl had Indian blood in her; that Stillman had signed over to her a million dollars; and had agreed that their children be reared in the Catholic religion.

MANY AT CEREMONY

GRAND ANSE, Que., July 27.—Lena Wilson, graduate of the north woods, celebrated her 18th birthday yesterday by marrying James Stillman, Jr., Princeton 27.

The marriage, solemnized on the lawn of the beautiful Stillman lodge in the wooded Canadian hills along the St. Maurice River, proceeded without incident, a feature not on the program being contributed after the ceremony, by Mrs. James A. Stillman, mother of the bridegroom, who threw crockery at some motion picture and news cameramen while the guests were assembled for refreshments.

On the wide award, with its setting of pines, in which the Stillman summer camp is situated, a temporary altar had been erected and by 3 p. m. the hour of the ceremony, the country people for miles around, bush workers, villagers and colonists from the outlying farms, were mingling with the hundreds of guests whose formal attire presented striking contrast to the home spurs of the northern settlers.

The throng gathered on the lawn and first appeared Father Ephraim Lamy, accompanied by Fathers Normand and Desilets. Then came the bride, sweetly attractive in her immaculate wedding gown, then the bridegroom and relatives of the two parties.

With due solemnity the ceremony went forward in accordance with the rites of the Roman Catholic Church.

The celebration that followed was entered into with true French-Canadian elation, the crockery bombardment of the luckless movie men being accepted only as a ludicrous interlude.

The camera men had been assigned to positions outside the lawn but during the ceremony crashed the gate and took up positions near the outside altar where the reverend father was saying the words uniting Lena and "Bud."

When the wedding party adjourned to the rear of the camp to witness the bride's cutting of the wedding cake and a birthday cake, too, the snap shooters and motion picture men followed.

They were finally almost on top of the cakes and then Mrs. Stillman went into action. She was inviting her guests to come and eat with the hospitable French cry "venez manger" when she suddenly turned on the photographers. She shoved those nearest crying at the same time, "Out of the way, this is for my friends, not for photographers."

Some were too far away to reach and she tossed several plates at them, only one, however, scoring a direct bullseye, although it was said a partial hit was scored by another.

HORSE IS BEST FOR ALL SHORT DELIVERIES

One Chicago Firm Orders All
Short Hauls To Be Made
By Horses

HORSES ARE SCARCE

DOYLESTOWN, July 27.—In spite of the tractor and automobile truck's great headway in replacing the horse on the farm and in the town and cities for commercial and agricultural purposes, Cletus L. Goodling, dean of National Farm School, sees a brighter day in store for the horse.

"In spite of the fact that the demand for horses at the present time is not greater than it was a year or more ago, horses are getting scarcer," declared Dean Goodling, who added that in his opinion there is no time like the present to breed horses.

He told of the policy recently adopted by one of the largest firms in Chicago that delivers daily to thousands of households. This firm has ordered that all deliveries within a radius of five miles of the center of the city where the store is located, be made by horse and wagon instead of by automobile truck.

"In a recent investigation made for short delivery service, it was found that it cost six cents to deliver by truck over a short distance route and three cents by horse and wagon over the same route," declared Dean Goodling.

Out in Cleveland a large firm several weeks ago purchased 250 horses for short hauls to replace the trucks that had previously been used, it was pointed out.

"Of course, on the longer hauls, the motor is by far the superior," Dean Goodling contended.

The fact that horses are very scarce at the present time and the fact that it is difficult to get horses in Bucks County or anywhere in the East, was another point made by the Farm School dean.

"There will always be a demand for horses, and I believe this demand will be on the increase. A few years ago the demand for light trucks and tractors on the farm and in the cities, caused a lull in the horse market. There has been very little breeding going on as a result of this. Fewer horses are being bred today than ever before."

Last year when he was superintendent of the farms at Pennsylvania State College, Dean Goodling said that he was compelled to travel 600 miles before he could purchase a suitable cartload of horses, and that the horses purchased cost $240 apiece last July.

"The average age of horses in Pennsylvania last year was between twelve and thirteen years, compared with the average age of between eight and nine years some years ago. This is because very few people are breeding horses. I believe that it would be opportune time to start breeding them now."

Dean Goodling said that to a certain extent horses will always be used in the farm in addition to the work the tractor can do, but that the big future for the horse in the city will be in the short haul.

LATE NEWS

CHICAGO, July 27 (I.N.S.).—Chris D. Hagerty, former president of the Press Club of Chicago, and radio editor of the Chicago Herald-Examiner, was found dead here today in his room at the Commonwealth Hotel. A blood-stained knife and a revolver with one cartridge exploded lay close by the chair in which Hagerty's body, sitting bolt upright, was discovered. Police announced after a cursory examination that the case was apparently suicide. Detectives stated they believed the editor had stabbed himself below the heart and then shot himself.

BRIDGEVILLE, Pa., July 27 (I.N.S.).—Sparks from an emery wheel today were believed to have caused a fire in the garage of the Colussy Motor Co., here, resulting in the destruction of 55 automobiles with a loss estimated at $150,000.

CHINA HALL SCRAP IS GOING TO COURT

Lefler Released On Bail On Charges Preferred By McGee

FIVE YOUTHS ARE HELD

DOYLESTOWN, July 27.—The scene of an alleged dispute between five Philadelphia youths and those in charge at the Croydon Country Club was shifted from the office of Justice of the Peace Irvin M. James to the Quarter Sessions Court when the Justice held the youths and the janitor of China Hall for trial at the September term of criminal court.

Edward J. McGee, 3118 Ruth street; John Davis, 2724 Waterloo street; James Meriner, Nicholas Conklin, 3029 Collins street; and Michael Troy, 1829 Hart Lane all of Philadelphia, were held under bail for trial in court on a charge of burglary and attempt at felonious entry. They waived a hearing on a charge of attempting to enter China Hall about 3 o'clock last Saturday morning.

On a charge of aggravated assault and battery brought by Edward J. McGee against Elwood Lefler, who said he was the janitor at China Hall, Lefler was released under $200 bail for court. Bail was furnished by a former Croydon constable. McGee, showed, under his chin, marks he said were inflicted by Lefler.

McGee and Meriner were also released under bail on a charge of larceny of five loaves of bread and some doughnuts from the A. & P. Store at Croydon.

Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, who represents Lefler, stated yesterday that he had been in trouble several times, had been in jail and was now on probation.

BATHING BEACHES ARE CENTERS OF ATTRACTION

Young And Old Enjoy The Sport All Day
Long

SUITS OF VARIED HUES

Those who have been in the habit of visiting the numerous bathing beaches about Bristol will know as soon as they hear the words just what is referred to by "Here they come." But for those who are missing half the joy of their lives by not donning suits and jumping into any available pool hereabouts, or who miss many laughs by not seeing others in action along Bristol's waterfronts, we will explain:

As every tug or steamboat comes down the river, whether large or small, one or two hundred pair of eyes watch it as it passes. Then gingerly stepping out into deeper water or taking a few strokes outward, they wait for the "rollies." It is then the cry arises, "Here they come." Then the fun begins as the heads bob up and down, or as the breakers splash upon the more timid ones nearer shore.

No matter where one goes about the borough during the warm spells, there are to be seen bathers and swimmers of every size and description. There are fat ones, there are lean ones; some are short and others tall; young, old and middle-aged.

And as to the suits—well that does require some description. The best thing to do if one wishes an actual picture of what the suits are like, would be to see for himself. Some of the stripes run horizontally, others point in the direction of the ground and sky. There are many that fit well, and still others that don't, but they all pass. Some of the latest styles among the "younger set" (ages 0 to 12) seem to resemble odd pieces of clothing that might be worn on the street. And as to the colors, telling about the rainbow wouldn't give half of them. Sixteen shades of red, a few more of green, with plenty of blues, yellows and sky-blue pinks mixed in! Go where you may—Harriman or Edgely beaches, at the Elks' float, the foot of any street in Bristol, or to the many locks that dot the canal that courses through the borough, and you will find new "stunts."

Many of the dives on the part of the older boys and girls are splendidly executed; but one of the most humorous pastimes is to watch the ludicrous antics of the small boys as they endeavor to imitate the dives of others. But they are doing the only thing possible if they wish to learn. Occasionally in the canal there is seen a channel grass fight. As one lad stands upon the bank making balls of the grass he then proceeds to see at what distance he can hit his target—said target being another swimmer who gets farther from the boy on the bank.

Human beings aren't the only ones who enjoy the water sports—as the dogs are not left at home, emphatically, no! One of the chief delights of the bathers, large and small, is to teach their canine pets to swim out for sticks or to jump from the diving boards.

A more hazardous stunt indulged in by several of the older boys is to seat themselves in canoes, paddle out near a large boat, and let the crafts gracefully ride the waves made by the large vessel. There's a method in the manner in which it is done.

Yes, the quickest way to make the big kids and little kids of Bristol lose interest in life would be to take from them the privilege of haunting their favorite swimming pool.

WILLS ENTERED FOR PROBATE ARE NUMEROUS

Estate of $60,000 Bequeathed

At the age of twenty-one, Robert G. Fell will receive the principal.

It is directed that all the real and personal property of the estate be sold. One-half the estate is then bequeathed to a daughter, Carrie S., wife of Samuel F. Doan, of Horsham. The other half is left in trust to the Doylestown Trust Company, to pay the income to a son, Arthur C. Fell for his maintenance and support, and upon his decease, pay the interest to Amy Fell, his wife, during her life. ADVERTISING DID IT

The name "Lindbergh" and its contractions and variations "Lindy" and "Lucky Lindy" have been given to articles of clothing, foods, toys and other merchandise. Songs have been written for phonograph records, player piano rolls and sheet music with Colonel Lindbergh and his epic flight as the theme.

One might prefer to look upon all these christenings as in commemoration of the charting of "Lindy's Lane" and as monuments honoring the valiant young aviator. But the least cynical must admit that it was commercialization pure and simple. Manufacturers and publishers used Lindbergh's name to sell their goods. However, the fact that the name sold the goods in amazing quantities proclaimed the greatness of the flyer louder than the Paris, London, New York, Washington and St. Louis crowds could have had they been combined into one howling mob.

But why did this hitherto unknown name sell goods in record quantities?

Advertising did it.

An unknown flew out of the West, paused a moment on the shores of the Atlantic and alighted some thirty hours later on the opposite shore. Newspapers, the radio, the movies and the tongues of millions advertised the feat and the name of the man who performed it until both were in the eyes and on the lips of the world. So well were Lindbergh and the "Spirit of St. Louis" advertised that mere association of the names with merchandise assured a tremendous and spontaneous demand for it.

Newspaper advertising, whether it be in the news columns or the pages of advertisements, has written fine to the time when "full many a flower is born to blush unseen and waste its sweetness on the desert air."

RUSSIA AND RECOGNITION

Some men of prominence in the affairs of American labor organizations are members of an unofficial delegation, calling itself the "American trade-union delegation," which will go to Russia to study economic conditions under the soviet regime.

It is apparent that the mission is to gather "proof" of Russia's claim to recognition by the United States government. Once gathered the evidence will be used as a basis for a campaign to convince the American people that diplomatic relations should be restored. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, says Senator Borah has promised to call a special session of the senate foreign relations committee to consider the delegation's report and that large corporations, desirous of doing business with Russia, are backing the scheme.

Why all the fuss? Before it sets sail from home the delegation knows it will find the time ripe for recognition. And the economic condition of Russia is already too well known to the world. Of course the delegation, upon its return, can speak with the tone of authority, just like the authors of all the other contradictory reports on Russia and communism.

If Russia wants American recognition for the mutual and legitimate benefit of the two nations she knows how to win it. The trade union delegation is just another bit of proof that America is in a receptive mood.

What Every Girl Should Know

By GISA PRUCHONE

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patry Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Mary "Elaine" Sullivan—slender, brightly, red-headed—is an orphan. Wally Mason, a young reporter, loves Mary. But she dwells in love. Mary keeps her for her brothers, Bobby and David. David is sentenced to prison for an auto fatality. The Charity Department takes Bobby. Wally proposes; but Mary goes to New York, gets a cloakroom job in a night club. It is raided. Mary is adjudged to have criminal influences, and is sentenced to a reform school. She gets a letter from Bobby, who is ill and wants her to come.

Mary had risen, holding the one page of lines running up and down written by a little hand with nothing upon which to rest. She held it to her breast, and then her cheek to feel the breath of Robert. "Will I come? Will Mary come? Oh darling! What to do now? Whither to turn? It was difficult to think. With heart beating with ache she stood, irresolute. She must think quickly. To ask Maria for permission to go to Robert? Would that do? No. That would not do. Maria wore great shoes with laces gleaming with polish and flat rubber heels. It would probably prove futile, asking Maria for permission to go to Robert. She knew it. Yet—what other way was there? To run away? Yes, if it came to that she would run away. But better first to ask Maria. Maria, Maria, Robert, Maria. The din of thoughts that clamored as she sped toward the pomposity of the great red brick pile with the white porticoes even in the rear. It had been a good job. The St. Mary's Home was built for stability. Built to face any change of fortune. Maria's work, present-see what he writes?" She came to the desk and gave the precious letter into the cold hands of Miss Giddings, her eyes filled with entreaty as she watched it.

Very compositely, over the scrawled lines, her gaze traveled Holding the letter away from her, with no semblance of interest. A reading in the line of duty.

"I see." She returned the paper to Mary. She settled back in her swivel chair and turned to Mary, toying with a pencil in her hand. "I can see how you feel about the matter of course. But I haven't the authority to permit you to go. I'm sorry, but there's nothing I can do."

"Of course." Of course, there would be nothing that Maria Giddings could do. Mary had known that. There was always a way out, however. That would never fail her.

"Is it—is it possible at all?" Mary's voice failed her then, but she cleared away the obstruction at the base of her throat.

"It all depends upon what the Board of Governors think."

"The Board of Governors?" A rather weak echo, that. And why the Board of Governors, and what had it to do with Bobbie, who was ill, and had things on his chest that hurt—now.

"Of course. They will have to decide. They make all such decisions."

"But Bobbie's sick," pitifully. "I'm sorry, but I can do nothing."

Well, that was that. She had tried. Now let come what may. She had done her utmost. Her tread was firm in leaving Maria's office. She had murmured, "Thank you." Thank you for what? Thank you for referring the matter to the Board of Governors, the Board of Governors that meets once a month.

And now there remained but one thing to do. Would it be difficult, Mary wondered, and as she thought her heart turned over in her breast. Not at the thought of the adventure on the morrow, but in dread of failure. If she failed, what then? Then it would mean that she would, in all probability, never see young Robert again. Not until her term was up. But it couldn't be. She wouldn't let it be. She built a little heap of courage and kept it fired during the long black slide of the night.

Shapeless gray-clad forms, with the bit of white at throat and cuffs walking in spiritless formation in twos and threes in the setting of the sun that pervaded the recreation grounds, and Mary, alone. Mary in a chill which nerves brought on. Mary on a green bench beneath the feeble elms, trembling, and endeavoring with a mighty effort of will to subdue that trembling. "You ain't sick, are you? You're that white it's a scare!"

"No," with the brightness of a smile. "I'm all right. Don't bother about me, Anna."

"If you're sick," doubtfully, "I can go tell someone. Mary was sweet. Pelish she admired the sickness of the hair that fell so softly on her forehead.

"No, no, Anna." In terror. "No, Anna. Don't bother."

Mary, on the little green bench, alone. Mary endeavoring to give an appearance of placid ease, with one hand plaiting and re-plaiting a fold of her heavy gray skirt. Little gathers, and tucks, and plaits. Others made, then obliterated by the careless hand, while beneath the cream of eyelids thoughts crammed. Thoughts fed upon by the actions in the yard. The phalanx of gray backs and the lit of a laugh that came from the midst of it. Now. Now. Now was the time. She half rose, and re-seated herself again. As Maria came forth with slow tread, clinking the rim of keys in her hand.

"You haven't heard again from your brother?"

"No."

A single glance that encompassed the square of yard, and Maria re-entered the house. At the same instant Mary clutched at freedom.

CHAPTER XI

Later, much later, young Robert asked, "Tell me again, Mary." He flung himself upon her and looked up into her face, and his own was filled with blazing excitement. "Tell me again how you hid in the woods of Camelot till the brave knight in his tin armor came out of the dark and his chariot was long and gleaming in the silver of the moon."

"Robert. Oh, Robert. I have told you, and told you—My throat is rasped Robert. What more would you?"

"I would hear it again, Mary. I would." Young Robert, earnestly, whistled Arthur Graham laughed and said, looking at the shine of Mary where she sat on the side of the bed, "Tell him. He won't sleep until you do."

"Well, I will, Arthur, and he's heard it so many times that he'll correct me and tell me where it is that I should use an adjective in stead of a noun—" half in despair.

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Did you ever really give the subject of the local merchant and you any serious thought?

Perhaps you are a loyal citizen and patronize local shops and stores as a matter of loyalty, but as this is not a lecture it will do no harm to read this, anyhow.

Your local merchant is first a citizen, a resident of your community the same as you are.

He lives in your community, pays taxes along with you for the upkeep and improvement of your community; he raises his family and sends his children to school—schools which he helps, with you, to maintain.

If he is a butcher, he buys clothes and shoes for his family from a fellow-merchant. No matter what his line of business, he spends money with other business men of the community.

He banks in local banks; he takes his family of an evening to the local shows.

Summed up, the money he makes in the community is spent in it.

Were it not for your local merchant, there would be no schools, no paved streets, no public buildings, no progress nor prosperity. He is here day in and day out, rain or shine, giving his time and energy and money to whatever will benefit the district, taking part in the administrations of the community or aiding to regulate the administration for the best interests of the community by his vote.

HE IS A CITIZEN—

Is he not entitled, then, to consideration?

But there is something more than a call for your loyalty to him as citizen to citizen—neighbor to neighbor.

Living here as he does, he comes to know his customers. They are to him not "just customers," but "fellow citizens," "good neighbors." As he will be here tomorrow and the next day and next year, meeting his customers face to face, day after day, his business gets his personal attention—every transaction is a personal dealing between him and the patron.

He is your neighbor—your fellow citizen, building for tomorrow and next year, and fully cognizant that the only way to build is to sell good goods at right prices.

Your local merchant is in himself a guarantee of his goods and prices and services because he is always at the same stand meeting largely the same customers.

He cannot exist upon the patronage of transients—his livelihood comes from permanent residents; his aim is to make permanent residents regular customers. He must do this—hence his wares, his prices and his service are all and always arranged and held to this end.

You never heard your live-wire, wide-awake home merchant say, "Oh, well, one customer more or less makes no difference." Every customer, to him, is important; a new customer is eagerly sought, and a customer less—well, your local merchant will not let it happen if anything just and reasonable under the sun will prevent such a thing happening.

So not alone out of a sense of loyalty to your community, but for your own sake—for the sake of your purse and the satisfaction of being given personal attention and service—buy of our home merchants.

PLEASANT TOUR THROUGH THE STATE

A figure-8 tour of Pennsylvania, covering approximately 1,200 miles, is outlined by Richard C. Haldeman, president of Pennsylvania Motor Federation. This long tour is divided into two parts, either of which is complete in itself and will bring the traveler back to his starting point.

"From time to time during the balance of the summer," said Mr. Haldeman, "the Motor Federation will furnish information concerning a number of beautiful drives through Pennsylvania. Nowhere in the East will the traveler find better roads passing through more splendid scenery."

The map shows a complete Western Pennsylvania Tour and a complete Eastern Pennsylvania Tour.

The tour through the western part of the state carries the traveler through the gas, oil and soft coal fields of Pennsylvania, gives him an opportunity to visit Pittsburgh and its many points of interest, carries him over the historic National Pike through Uniontown and Cumberland. The section of Pennsylvania east and West of Uniontown was the scene of early activities by George Washington. The grave of General Braddock is a few feet from the National Pike, several miles east of Uniontown. One of the most perfect roads in Pennsylvania is that south from Bedford to Cumberland. In fact, the entire section from Altoona to Cumberland is chiefly of concrete, eighteen feet wide and in excellent condition.

Just north of Tyrone, at Bald Eagle, the traveler picks up the Lakes-to-sea Highway, on which he continues to DuBois. The road section between Bald Eagle and Phillipsburg is one of great beauty. From DuBois through Ridgway, Kane and Warren to Union City the State Highway Department has laid some marvelous concrete equalling that between DuBois and Bald Eagle. Titusville and Oil City are in the heart of the Pennsylvania oil and gas fields. At Titusville will be found a monument erected to Colonel Drake, who discovered oil in this state. The drive from Franklin to Pittsburgh is of rare beauty.

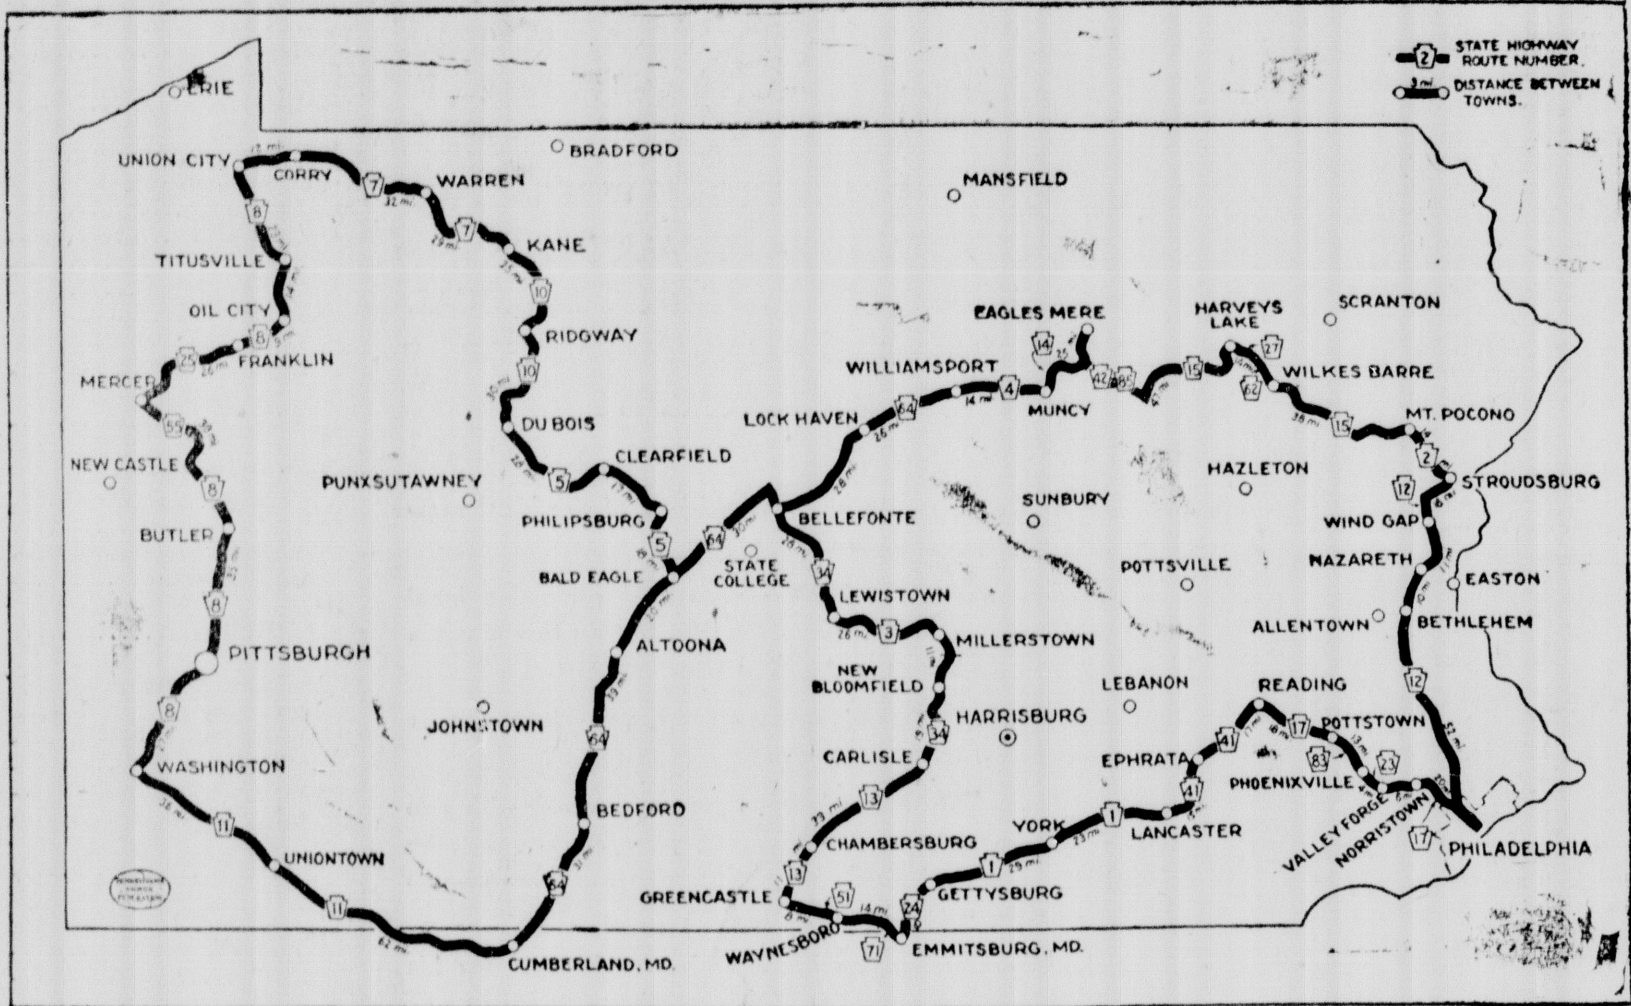

The Eastern Tour

Thirty miles of eighteen-foot concrete connect the Eastern and Western tours. From Bellefonte, the drive to State College is a short one. Some excellent macadam and concrete are found crossing the Seven Mountains between Bellefonte and Lewisburg. The traveler follows the William Penn Highway to Millerstown, where he leaves Route 3 and continues over a new concrete road to Carlisle. The route is then through the famous Cumberland Valley to Chambersburg and Greencastle. There are few more beautiful sections of country anywhere than that between Greencastle, Waynesboro and Emmitsburg, Maryland. The traveler passes through the South Mountains and will see many summering places patronized chiefly by Maryland and Washington people. The route from Emmitsburg is over a concrete road to Gettysburg. Nearly a million people visited the battlefield in 1926. From Gettysburg the route is over the Lincoln Highway to Lancaster. This section of Pennsylvania is noted for its agriculture. At Ephrata will be found the ancient Cloister of German Baptist Brethren, which, during the Revolutionary War, was a hospital for Colonial soldiers. This Cloister housed sisters and brethren of the order of the Rose of Sharon. From Reading to Philadelphia the drive is through a section rich in historical lore. The traveler visits Valley Forge, sacred in Pennsylvania history.

The route from Philadelphia to Stroudsburg is over the old Bethlehem Pike. East and West of Bethlehem on the William Penn Highway are Easton and Allentown. North of Bethlehem the traveler passes through Nazareth and the Wind Gap. This Gap is several miles west of the famous Delaware Water Gap. The Stroudsburg and Mt. Pocono region is famous as a summer playground, and the section from Mt. Pocono to Wilkes-Barre contains hundreds of summer homes. West of Wilkes-Barre is Harvey's Lake, the largest body of water in Pennsylvania. Continuing west on Traffic Route No. 15 the traveler passes famous Rickett's Glenn, a heavily wooded defile containing scores of waterfalls, the highest of which is over one hundred feet.

The water which tumbles over these cascades is from Lake Ganoga, the highest fresh water lake in the United States, east of the Rocky Mountains.

Returning from Eagles Mere, where the lake and summer hotels are an attraction, the traveler continues through Muncy to Williamsport, once the center of Pennsylvania's huge lumbering industry. The balance of the route to Bellefonte is through some very pretty country.

The only earth section on this extensive tour of Pennsylvania is found between Harvey's Lake and a point east of Muncy. This earth section comprises about twenty miles of very good dirt road.

The entire tour covers approximately 1,200 miles. On the Western Section the distance is about 560 miles; on the Eastern Section, 600 miles; on the connecting link, 30 miles.

UMPIRE SUES PLAYERS FOR $80,000

Mal Eason former Pacific Coast League umpire, is suing Marty Krug (right), manager of the Los Angeles club, and Frank Brazill (left), infielder on the same team, for $80,000, because of an altercation with the pair which, he alleges, resulted in serious injuries, loss of his job, and humiliation. Krug and Brazill deny his charges.

Why are there so many charming women today?

Never before have there been so many charming women. Wherever you go, you find them. Vivacious, happy, beautiful, delightfully dressed in the most exquisite taste.

Clear, pink-and-white complexion, luxurious, well-kept hair, gleaming teeth, trim athletic carriage — these are almost universal characteristics of American women of today.

Why?

At first thought it may sound absurd, but one of the most powerful teachers has been advertising.

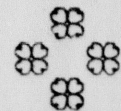

Advertising has helped to teach us all that the real basis of beauty is health and cleanliness. We are the greatest users of soap and water in the world.

Advertising has taught us how to care for our teeth, our hair, our feet, our hands and our complexions.

Advertising has taught us how to dress—how to choose colors and fabrics and becoming styles.

Advertising has taught us how to talk, how to entertain.

One reason why so many women are charming is because so many women are reading advertising. From advertising they are learning the secrets of great beauty specialists. They are getting health information of inestimable value. They are learning the secrets of becoming dress from the famous designers of Paris and New York.

Advertising is one of the biggest reasons why so many women are so charming
